VOLUME LXVIII., NUMBER 39. REDWOOD CITY, SAN MATEO COUNTY, CALIFORNIA, JANUARY 6, 1928. ESTABLISHED 1859.

METROPOLITAN BAY AREA ANTICIPATED

REDWOOD CITY TO BE INCLUDED IN BAY REGION CENSUS

Following the reading by City Clerk W. A. Price from the Regional Planning Commission, the board of trustees passed a resolution asking that this city be included in the 1930 United States census report as included in the San Francisco bay region.

The letter from the Regional Planning Commission stated that heretofore only San Francisco and the East Bay cities have been included in this region. But this census Los Angeles will ask to have all territory between San Pedro and San Bernardino included in its regional census, and in order that the northern part of the state may be fairly represented, San Francisco is asking that nine counties surrounding the bay be included. These are San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Clara, Alameda, Napa, Solano, Marin, and Contra Costa counties.

The census in intended to indicate a trading area, it was stated, and good showing is of great assistance n securing industries, western sales agencies, etc.

Commission Thanked for Improvements on Peninsula

The interest taken by the California State Highway Commission in the development of the peninsula prompted the writing of a letter of thanks to the commission by the Down Town Association of San Francisco. The Down Town Association has taken a great interest in the development of several projects in this county, and has been responsible for the interest taken in matters along the peninsula by the various agencies of the state.

The letter sent to the Highway Commission follows:

California State Highway Com.,
State Building,
San Francisco, California.
Gentlemen:

Tendering to your honorable body the compliments of this holiday season, the Down Town Association takes the opportunity to express its appreciation of the excellent service you have done in promoting the development of California's State highway system, especially in the bay district and more especially on the San Francisco peninsula.

As a steadfast advocate of a second main highway from San Francisco to San Jose this Association realizes your intelligent understanding of the urgent need of such an outlet and your prompt action toward extending the Bay Shore road. This feeling is intensified by knowledge of the many projects in all other parts of the state which are pressed upon your attention and demand your careful study.

With good reason for trusting that during 1928 there will be no cessation of the energy you have displayed in responding to the appeal of the peninsula communities for additional facilities to relieve their ever-growing volume of highway traffic, we are,

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed)
CONSTANT J. AUGER,
President

Chairman Highway Committee

WELL KNOWN LOCAL PEOPLE MARRIED IN SOUTH

The wedding of Mrs. Emily Werder and L. G. Rowen, both of this city took place Saturday in the southern part of the state, where Mr. and Mrs. Rowen are now spending a few weeks in a wedding tour. Upon their return they will make their home in Edgewood Park.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Rowen are very well known here, where both have been in business. Mrs. Rowen is the daughter of Mrs. Elsie Goertzhain of El Camino Real, and for a number of years conducted the Art and Floral Shop on Broalway.

The groom has been engaged in business here for several years and for some time has been a salesman in the office of Lambert & Walter.

George Bell, of the Sequoia Union High School faculty, and his daughter, Miss Mary Bell, returned this week from Iowa. They went east on the sad mission of laying to rest the remains of Mrs. George Bell, who passed away in Redwood City in December.

Boy Returned to Father Following Discovery At Belmont

Recognized by Deputy Sheriff Tom Maloney and Undersheriff Ed Farrell as he was viewing the wreck of the bus at Belmont Monday evening, Alfred McCausland of San Francisco was brought to the jail here and held for the arrival of his father. Alfred McCausland, who is 15 years old, ran away from his home in San Francisco.

The boy took what clothes he was wearing, a shot gun and an old car and drove as far as San Carlos, where his car was disabled in a collision. He stayed at San Carlos over night and on Monday when he heard of the bus wreck at Belmont, he got a ride on a tow car sent to the scene of the accident. It was here that the deputies from the sheriff's office recognized him.

County in Argument Concerning Creek

Who is right? That is a question which the board of supervisors face in regard to the matter of dumping refuse in the San Francisquito creek. The board protested some time ago against the action of the city of Palo Alto in dumping large quantities of broken concrete into the creek at the upper end of the bridge across the Middlefield road which connects this county and the county of Santa Clara at Palo Alto.

A communication from the engineering department of Palo Alto was received last Tuesday in which it was stated that the material was dumped into the creek to prevent the erosion of the bridge heads by the winter freshets. It was suggested that as the city of Palo Alto had spent considerable money in this work, that this county should pay half of the expense.

According to the supervisors, however, instead of preventing erosion as intended, the refuse dumped into the creek will merely divert the channel against the San Mateo county side of the bridge and result in the washing out of this end of the bridge.

Local Labor Warned Against Lumber Camps

The lumber camps of the north west have an over abundance of labor, according to a letter received by the Redwood City council from the mayor of Eureka. The letter stated that owning to reports that there were many jobs in lumber mills and on the state highways in the northern part of the state, many laborers have gone to Eureka and the surrounding territory, only to find themselves without work. The condition has become quite serious, and the Eureka official asked that the matter be given publicity, that unemployed men might not go to the north west to look for work.

Sheriff's Office Has Busy Season

The criminal apprehension work of the sheriff's office is always sure of front page stories and is always before the public. So much is this side of the work of the office stressed that many lose sight of the fact that this is only a minor feature of the work of this office.

In view of this fact the report filed this week by C. A. Callaghan, deputy sheriff in charge of the civil proceedure in the office, proves interesting. Callaghan's report shows that the office handled 908 civil cases during the year 1927. During the preceeding year 784 cases were taken care of by the sheriff's office. The fees collected in 1927 amounted to $2,093.01, or an average of $2.30.

The civil work of the sheriff's office included attachments filed, property seized for debt and similar proceedings.

Exchange Club Hears Talk on Tahiti Island

An interesting address on Tahiti was given before the Redwood City Exchange Club on Tuesday evening by N. P. Selover of San Mateo, who had spent six years on that island. Selover discussed the life on the island and exhibited many photographs and some curios from there.

Frank Griffin, who has conducted the club through a very successful years as its president, expressed his regrets at having come to the end of his year and passed over the gavel to his successor, Dr. W. B. Langston.

Dr. Langston, in accepting the position as president of the club, predicted a bright year ahead for the club, and expressed his appreciation for the honor so accorded him by the members of the club. This is the third year of the club's existence, and as the pioneering work is over Langston looks forward to great accomplishments in the future.

A unique gavel made in the shape of a huge molar was made by Wilbur Doxsee and presented to the new president. The "molar" will be the emblem of authority in the Redwood City Exchange Club for 1928. It is rumored that Wilbur Doxsee sacrificed a perfectly good molar in order to get a pattern for the gavel.

The other officers who assumed their positions this week were: Kendall Towne, first vice-president; Stanley Netherton, second vice-president; Guy R. Kennedy, third vice-president; Al Davies, financial secretary; L. P. Gray, recording secretary; J. W. Locker, treasurer; Harry Hallett, Frank Griffin, Jack Fox and Carroll Hall, board of of controll members. The hold-over board members are A. J. Stebenne and D. Wr. H. Murphy. The party, as usual, proved to be one of the jolliest and most enjoyable of the season, and no effort was spared by the fire fighters to make the evening one to be remembered by those present. This department not only knows how to fight the red demon but they know how to entertain.

Community singing at the banquet tables was one of the enjoyable features of the evening.

SEVEN CARS IN HIGHWAY CRASH

Week-end Toll Heavy; Death and Injury Follow in Wake

An accident which involved seven cars and resulted in the death of Mrs. Tony T. Silva, wife of a Beresford rancher, featured the week-end highway toll at San Mateo. The Silva car was wrecked in a head-on collision with one driven by J. Harris of San Francisco. The force of the impact hurled Siva's machine against another car, resulting in the wrecking of the third car.

Before the injured persons could be extricated four other machines crashed into the wreckage with more or less serious results. Besides Mrs. Silva, who pased away Sunday night at the Community hospital as the result of a broken neck, the only person seriously injured in the wreck was Frank McNally, a police officer of San Mateo, who was a passenger in Silva's car. McNally received injuries which make his condition critical at the present time.

Medical Board Hits At Fake Herbalist

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, January 5— A complaint is out against a new miracleman, Matthus Blankenberg, formerly of Thermal, Riverside county, self-tyled Prince of Isachor and Lord-heir of the old Blankenberg castle in Germany for violating the medical practice act, according to Dr. C. B. Pinkham, secretary of the State Board of Medical Examiners.

Making the thin fat and the fat thin were a part of the cures promised by Blankengerg. For a thin man he prescribed "one pint of number three tea, one fifteen cent dish of icecream, one ten cent dish of ice cream, one glass of beer, one twenty cent piece of cake."

His usual procedure was to treat the patients with herbs and teas and rub them with oils, he especially advertised to cure tubercular patients. But after three of them had responded by dying, the medical board decided to curb the "herbalist" as he styled himself, whereupon Blankenberg fled from Riverside before process could be served on him and is now a fugitive from justice.

Trustees "Panned" In Protest Meeting Tuesday

A meeting scheduled for the hearing of protests on the assessments for a sewer contract recently completed on Roble avenue and other streets in the South Redwood district proved to be a general panning of the board on every topic which residents of the recently annexed district could call to mind, from mud holes in the street to the raise in taxes.

The matter of constructing a board walk over the ditch which parallles the Woodside road, was the chief topic for talk. In this matter, however, the residents of the district divided, some favoring a plank walk, other demanding the installation of a three foot storm sewer and the filling of the ditch.

City Engineer Dimmitt stated that a three foot storm sewer would be altogether too small, and that three such sewers would be required to carry off the water which runs through the ditch during a storm. He stated that eventually a re-enforced culvert would ahve to be built, but that the board favored the installation of a board walk over the present ditch until such time as it would appear feasible to build the culvert.

Mrs. J. LaDieu, one of the residents of Central avenue, protested against the spending of money for building a wooden walk, which she said would be torn to pieces within six months. She suggested the laying of a three foot sewer on the south side of the Woodside road and of a two-foot sewer on the north side. Dimmit said that the two-foot sewer would be ample for the north side of the road, but that he would not be responsible for laying a three-foot line on the south.

Several residents of the district demanded that something be done, no matter what, in order that a place be furnished for the children attending the Washington school may not be forced too walk on the crowded road. Several stated that they were willing to give money themselves toward this project, after Mayor Beeger had explained that the school district had been unable to assist the board in the matter of financing the project.

Action was promised by the board. It was feld that the matter should be taken up with the board of supervisors, and the county asked to stand a part of the cost of building a culvert, as most of the water which runs through the ditch, comes from the hills back of Redwood City, and drains a large tract of land outside of the city limits.

Protests were made concerning the conditions of several of the streets in the new district which were said to be impassable because of the mud. Trustee Dearborn was delegated to secure crushed rock for such places.

In the sewer contract matter many and various protests were made, but none that the board could accept as legitimate objections to the work. Some question was raised as to the cost of the work and City Engineer Dimmitt explained the items which were questioned. City Attorney Mansfield explained the reason for the incidental expenses which make the assement more that actual contract price to the contractor.

The matter of lights was also brought up by residents of the district. The board refered this matter to City Electrician Collins, who stated that work was now under way for the extension of lights to the entire district. It would not be possble, he explained, to set poles and erect lights on one street now and later on some others. The whole district must be completed at one time, and this is being done, he said as fast as possible. Transformers for this project are now being expected from the east, and as soon as these arrive the work will be completed.

When someone charged that that taxes were being collected from the district but nothing in return done, Mayor Beeger stated that $20,000 had been spent in improvements to the South Redwood Distict before a cent of taxes had been collected.

While most of the citizens appeared anxious to learn what the board was doing, some took occasion to heckle the board and made "panning" remarks. When Building Inspector Drathman set the council's clock ahead a half hour, some one cried, "The clock's like the board, it's slow." Membes of the board were charged with "passing the buck", and one man openly asserted that "We'll never get anything out of this board."

The request will be made by State Forester M. B. Pratt.

Construction of the new $350,000 students' hospital on the Berkeley campus will begin immediately after the new year, according to an announcement made last week by supervising architect George W. Kelham. Arthur N. Brown of San Francisco has been appointed architect in charge of the work, which will be speeded up for completion by the spring of 1929. The new infirmary will be built on the east side of College avenue, across from the present building, which will be demolished as soon as the new structure is completed. It will contain between 90 and 110 beds, with an adequate dispensary, and will be provided with modern equipment.

Stage operators who are members of the Motor Carriers' Association of California made a "Christmas present" of more than half a million dollars to the State of California last week according to an announcement by Ray L. Riley, state controller. This amount, representing disputed taxes under the Duval acts of 1923 and 1925, has been paid by the motor carriers rather than subject the State government to the necessity of filling numerous individual suits for collection. The Duval acts, fixing a tax of four per cent on the gross earnings of certain classes of commercial highway users, was attacked in the courts. The United States Supreme Court finally upheld the act.

Legislation requiring special qualifications in all persons seeking appointment as probations officers in this State will be requested of the Legislature in 1929 by Mrs. Anna L. Saylor, state director of social welfare, she announced last week. Mrs. Saylor charged that the probation officers now holding office throughout the State include former bartenders, saloon-keepers and others with little or no training in the problems of social welfare work. While some are excellent officers, she said, many are not.

Definite steps toward establishment of a segregation unit at one of the State hospitals for the special treatment of narcotic drug addicts are being taken by Governor C. C. Young's administration, it was announced last week by Alexander R. Heron, State director of finance. A survey considering facilities of all State hospitals in the light of the last legislature's vote in favor of a segregation unit has been conducted by the department of institutions, and the list of institutions deemed available for this work, Heron revealed, has been narrowed down to three.

Residents of Van Nuys are asking for an appropriation of $300,000 for the building of a civic center to include a new city hall, police station and jail, and a receiving hospital branch. Van Nuys is headquarters in municipal affairs for all that part of San Fernando Valley annexed to Los Angeles city.

It cost Yolo County $22,922.22 to support its county hospital and farm during the fiscal year ending June 30th. This is according to the annual financial report of County Auditor Fred Porter, just rendered the Yolo county board of supervisors.

Representatives of the oil industry and members of Governor C. C. Young's commission to seek curtailment of the present gas wasteage in California oil fields will meet in San Francisco, January 5, to give further consideration to the problems. An agreement under which gas conservation may be effected is hoped for at this conference, according to members of the State commission.

A survey of the laws of California and legal revisions attempted in other States is being made by Fred B. Wood, chief of the State Legislature Counsel Bureau, in preparing a report for the next Legislature on advisability of undertaking a codification of all statutes. The measure directing this study was sponsored by Assemblyman Z. S. Leymel of Fresno.

J. M. Friedlander, commissioner of corporations, has written Edwin B. Cassidy, a Los Angeles certified public accountant, a decision in which he states that only trust companies, banks and similar institutions should be approved as registrars in California. Cassidy had requested the commissioner to authorize the appointment of certified public accountants as registrars in this State. "It is obvious to us," said Friedlander in part, "in the light we see it, that the method of having trust companies, banks or those others organized to do a business in this State in conformity with the laws that apply to trust companies, is more practical and is best calculted and designed to give the public the protection that it is entitled to in the regulation of dealing in securities."

Automobile license plates for nearly a half million motorists will be placed in the mails by the end of this week by the division of motor vehicles. Through an arrangement with the postal authorities, the division postponed the mailing of plates until after Christmas in order to avoid clogging the mails during the holiday rush. The plates are being forwarded, together with the white certificates of registration to the addresses given by the applicants.

The proposed terminus of one projected bridge was changed from San Pablo to Albany last week when T. A. Tomasina withdrew his plea at a meeting of the Contra Costa county supervisors for permission to build the bridge. Tomasina now plans to build a bridge from Albany in Alameda county to Bluff Point on the Marin county shore. The Albany survey was preferred because the builder wishes to reach as nearly as possible the center of population of East Bay communities. The bridge will cost $20,000,000, Tomasina estimates, and will be a fill and spans combined 34,250 feet long.

Fishing and hunting licenses will go up in price on January 2nd. This is according to the National Automobile Club. As a result of the law adopted at the last session of the legislature, hunters and anglers will pay $2 each for permits to hunt or fish, starting with the New Year.

Savings of $10,408.75 have been made by 7000 children in San Diego city schools since September, according to a report last week issued by C. A. Nyhus, head of the school bank system. The school bank system is a member of the San Diego Clearinghouse Association and has funds guaranteed by all San Diego banks. Two years ago this method was innovated by Will Angier, and to date the children of San Diego have banked over $140,000.

Tahoe Transportation Company has been granted a certificate by the railroad commission to operate auto stage service for the transportation of passengers, baggage and express between Tahoe City and Brockway and intermediate points and between Tahoe City and Lakeside and Fallen Leaf Lake and intermediate points, and also to operate auto truck service for the transportation of freight and express between the same points, and to consolidate such operation with its present service as a unified system.

California's automobile death toll has been steadily increasing for the last six years, and the total number of deaths from motor vehicle accidents this year will probably shatter all records. This conclusion was draw last week from official records of the State Bureau of Vital Statistics showing that automobile deaths for the first nine months of 1927 aggregate 1,224, 139 more than all the victims of highway accidents in 1922.

The State government has invested $18,049,834.84 in farms and homes for former service men in the last six years, it was announced last week in a report issued by George M. Stout, secretary of the State Veterans' Welfare Board. Funds from sale of veterans' bonds, to be retired as the former service men pay for the property, have been used to purchase 3,624 homes and 211 farms, Stout said. Farm and home purchases in the three leading counties total as follows: Los Angeles, $6,272,180; Alameda, $2,959,515; San Francisco, $1,850,475.

Oil field operations in California reported to State Oil and Gas Supervisor R. D. Bush during the week ended December 24, 1927, shows 26 new wells started, compared with 30 during the previous week. Of the 26 notices to drill filed, none were for wells in the Long Beach field, five in the Huntington Beach field, one in the Seal Beach field, one in Los Angeles county, five in the fields of Ventura county, one in Santa Barbara county and four in the fields of Kern county. The total new wells this year is 1,239, compared with 1,282 at the same date last year.

AN ELECTRIC WASHER

Mrs. Brown—"Have you an electric washer at home?" Mrs. Jones—"Sometimes I think she is—I'm so often shocked at the way she does up the clothes."

Youthful Discretion

He was rather a pathetic figure. He had the soul of the real sheik, but was afflicted with one of those faces which clash with all but the most subdued fashions and shades.

One afternoon he called at the house of a particular girl friend, and while waiting for her to appear was entertained by her ten-year-old brother.

"Well," remarked our hero, with a smile, "what do you think of me?"

The boy maintained a discreet silence.

"Aren't you going to say?"

"No," was the firmly given reply. "I was never a fighting man."

For Star Boarders

"How long in jail fo', Mose?"

"Two weeks."

"What am de cha'ge?"

LONG AND SHORT OF IT

Grace—"She may be all right, but I don't think she's long for this world." Maggie—"No doubt of that—she's the dumpiest little thing I've ever seen."

Essay on Geese

The following composition on geese was written, according to Capper's Weekly, by a schoolboy in St. Louis: "Geese is a heavy-set bird with a head on one side and a tail on the other. His feet is set so far back on his running gear that they nearly miss his body. Some geese is ganders and has a curl in his tail. Ganders don't lay or set. They just eat, loaf and go swimming. If I had to be a geese, I would rather be a gander. Geese do not give milk, but give eggs, but for me, give me liberty or give me death."

Next Best Delight

A small boy whose parents had repeatedly instructed him not to eat candy was visiting an aunt. A dish of the forbidden sweets was sitting on the table and edging near, the lad said: "Please, auntie, just let me smell of the candy."

His Preference

A farmer took his wife to a concert, and after listening with apparent joy the pair suddenly became interested in one of the choruses: "All we, like sheep, have gone astray."

First a sharp soprano voice exclaimed: "All we, like sheep"; next a deep voice uttered in a most earnest tone: "All we, like sheep." Then all the singers at once asserted: "All we, like sheep."

"Well, I don't!" exclaimed the farmer to his wife. "I like beef and bacon, but I can't bear mutton."

Odd Use for Old Ships

A plan for converting useless old ships into assets is under consideration by the New Jersey fish and game commission, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It has been found that fish are attracted to wrecks. So it is the idea of the commission to sink worthless craft off the coast where they will not be a menace to shipping and so draw the fish that feed on the marine animal and vegetable life that accumulates on the old hulls.

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean, like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

A Sound and Matured Judgment

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE is not one to be stampeded into hysterics by appearances. His ideas are not the result of shallow or half-baked convictions. Knowing the man, his words take on a deeper significance, and his utterances receive the consideration due to sound and mature judgment.

In this connection his statement in regard to the present condition of American society is reassuring to those who by judging from the headlines of the press have come to doubt the stability of our people.

"Society," he said, "is made up of constants and variables. The variables attract us by their contrasts and are always appearing in the headlines. But the constants always predominate, always push ahead in the march of progress. We hear enough of criticism, we hear enough of the evil; but we must not forget commendation, we must not forget the good. This is our country. It is solid, sound, secure. It is for us to put forth sufficient effort to keep it so."

Weed Out the Arsonists

DURING 1926 the national fire loss totaled $560,548,624, the highest in this country's history. Conservative estimtes say that at least one-third of this loss was the result of arson.

Fires caused by carelessness or ignorance are bad enough, and the public should be more willing to learn how to prevent them. But how much more serious and terrible is the fire caused purposely by the arsonist.

Arson is one of the worst crimes and should be considered as such. The arsonist imperils life, property and the prosperity of communities. Last year he destroyed at least $186,849,540 in property value, not to mention the lives he snuffed out.

The public should give every aid to apprehending this destroyer. Judge and state's council should deal with him rigorously, to the full extent of the law. He is deserving of no sympathy. When we have conquered arson, we shall have gone a long way in solving the fire-loss problem.

The Price of Carelessness

THE long expected has happened. Owners of private passenger cars, beginning December 12, will have to pay an incerased rate for public liability insurance. The raise for the whole country averages about 16 per cent. For some years past, the rate on this type of insurance has been going down steadily.

The experience ratio on which the new rates are based covers the period from 1923 to 1927 inclusive. It shows the downward trend stopped and turned abruptly upward in 1925. In 1926, insurance companies as a whole suffered an underwriting loss, and available data for 1927 shows the upward trend of losses is continuing.

The new rates were adopted after long and careful study, and the principal causes which forced upward revision of rates are:

1. More powerful automobiles and greater speed
2. Increased mileage of improved highways and greater use of automobiles.
3. Increasing frequency of claims.
4. Growing tendency on part of injured persons to demand larger damages.
5. Marked tendency on part of juries to award larger damages.

Every day local newspapers recount automobile accidents where one or more persons are injured and killed by one collision. Accident prevention work has been carried on by railroads, insurance companies, public utilities, private industries, cities and states. If it had not been for this work, rates would have shown a greater increase.

Albert W. Whitney, acting general manager of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, says that praiseworthy results have been accomplished through traffic regulation, strict examination of requirements for drivers, safety campaigns among both drivers and pedestrians, revocation of the driving licenses of operators, and penalties imposed by courts on careless and reckless operators.

"There is much work yet to be done in the field of accident prevention and the insurance companies are among the most enthusiastic in hoping that the near future will bring forth results which will justify a downward revision of rates."

The public can co-operate to reduce accidents; or it can disregard safety measures and, in addition to injury and death, it can pay increased insurance rates. The price of carelessness comes high, with or without insurance.

HOMES PROMISE TO BE BETTER FOR NEW YEAR

State Aids Vets In Home Building Program Here

By ESTO BROUGHTON

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 5 — "A little grey home in the west" of their very own will materialize for approximately 3500 ex-service men during the new year under the California Veterans' bond act, according to George H. Stout, secretary of the Veterans Welfare Board.

And the veterans' homes purchased during the coming year promises to be bigger and better than those purchased heretofore because while under old legislation an ex-soldier was limited to a $5,000 house or a $7,500 farm, now under a new law he may add money of his own to the state loan and buy a home worth $7,500 although the state will advance $5,000 toward its purchase.

Approximately $15,000,000 of the entire $30,000,000 bond issue voted by the people remains to be spent in purchases for veterans. Enough applications are on file for state loans to use up the whole sum available, Stout stated. And investigations and appraisements of the sites selected by the ex-service men are being rushed as fast as possible, the secretary assured the veterans, and by the last of 1928 the state hope to have all the purchases completed.

Ex-soldiers and sailors show a decided perchant for city life and of the 3277 men who have already been located by the state in homes of their own, only 202 have chosen to take advantage of the state's larger loan for a farm, the records indicate.

Los Angeles led the state in the number of veterans placed in homes of their own with 1134 purchases made before the close of the old year, and Alameda county folowed with 540 veterans' homes selected. The activity of the ex-service men in "owning their own home" within this territory, lead Stout to predict probably 1200 would be settled in Los Angeles homes by means of state loans during this year, and probably 550 in Alameda county.

Sutter and Gleen counties excel in the number of soldier-farmers within their borders, six farms, and only five homes were bought for veterans in the former county, and four farms and only one home in the latter by the state in Sutter and $40,000 in Glenn.

Stanislaus county ranks fourth in the state in the number of farms secured for veterans with a total of 13, and the estimated expenditure in 1928 approximates $185,000 for both farms and homes.

Merced county veterans on the other hand "choose" town homes, rather than ranches. Only one of th 12 men receiving loans preferred a farm. Stout estimates the new year veterans' investment in this county at $60,000.

Among the 34 veterans aided in Marin county, 14 of them were wounded or disabled men, according to the state reports.

Approximately 40 ex-service men expect to purchase Marin county homes during 1928 thru the help of the state it was learned from the department records.

In San Mateo county all the 52 veterans selected homes in preference to farms and similarly in Santa Clara county 81 men chose homes and none farms. Nearly a quarter of a million will be spent by the state in 1928 in behalf of other veterans in San Mateo county and approximately $400,000 in Santa Clara, according to the veteran board estimates.

The veterans program will be initiated in Lassen county during the coming year with a number of the Lassen ex-service men anxious to take advantage of the long-term, low-interest loans from the state.

In Placer, Colusa and Shasta counties, few have taken up homes under the state loan plan but several applications are pending. So far eight have been assisted in Placer county, seven securing homes and one a farm; two bought homes in Shasta, while in Colusa two bought farms and one a home. During 1928 $40,000 additional will be spent in Placer and $20,000 in both Shasta and Colusa.

Solano county veterans were almost equally divided between homes and farms, four selecting the former and three the latter. The estimated expenditure for the coming fiscal year in Solano is $40,000 for additional purchases.

"Big Parade" Coming To Sequoia Theatre

"Many people have asked if "The Big Parade" was ever coming to Redwood City. At the time we were uncertain, but due to hard efforts we have been able to secure this picture.

Undoubtedly "The Big Parade" is the most true to life war drama ever filmed in the history of moving pictures. Many incidents are brought out that would never be told by boys who served over there . . . the truth about the cure this picture," said Otway Cosgrave, manager of the Sequoia Theatre, yesterday.

King Vidor has reached an exalted cinematic goal with this picture. The film has a material swing and the rhythm of blended comedy and drama. It's romance and heart interests awaken a response in every spectator in the aulence.

John Gilbert is superb as the American Doughboy; he has never done any thing finer. Renee Adoree plays the part of the French Mellsande to perfection. Kark Dane and Tom O'Brien are just a couple of buddies not knowing what the war is all about. Hobart Bosworth, Claire McDowell and Robert Ober play mportant parts.

You can be assured that you will leave the theatre with something to think about.

Governor Young Favors Sending "Gold Star" Mothers Abroad

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, January 5.—Governor C. C. Young, in a letter to James W. Foxall, chairman of the "Gold Star" Mothers Pilgrimage, has heartily endorsed the proposal that the Gold Star Mothers of America visit, as the guests of the United States government, the military cemeteries in Europe where their sons lie buried.

"I know of no better way than such a pilgrimage as you propose of signifying to these mothers that the country has not forgotten the supreme sacrifice that their sons and they so heroically made," said the governor.

"Certainly if the sorrow of these mothers can be softened in any degree, or their grief assuaged by such a visit, the whole Nation will rejoice that a way has been found which some measure of comfort can be accorded them."

Efficiency

DOWN the road it travels, one of the most efficient things on wheels. Coils of wire are stored inside. Tools are in the snug lockers. Pike poles and shovels are in their racks. A big winch is bolted to its frame and there are pipes of steel from which to form a sturdy derrick.

Sometimes it draws a trailer loaded with long, straight poles. Sometimes it bears a heavy reel of cable. Often its load is men.

The telephone truck gets many a glance as it passes. For whether on the peace-time job of construction and maintenance or bound to where snow and sleet have made for it a battle ground, it means power, speed, efficiency, economy and human loyalty, united in the task of making telephone service better, broader, more dependable.

If you wish to improve a room's appearance in an easy, inexpensive way, do it with good lighting.

The money you spend for one of these lamps does more to improve a room than the same money spent for other furnishings.

For the abundant, soft, colorful light makes an "interior" seem lovelier. It's just like redecorating the whole room.

This lamp is different from any other lamp. There is a reflector under the silk shade that diffuses or scatters the light.

The lamps (both floor and table) have a base finished in silver or gold and there is a selection of four silk shades. You can see them at our office.

Mrs. John Christ is spending the holidays with her daughter, Mrs. L. D. Rathbone at Santa Rosa. Her younger daughter, Ollie, is visiting friends at Berkeley.

Flowers Arrive In Fine Shape At Honolulu

County Horticultural Commissioner A. W. Tate has received a report from the Department of Agriculture, Territory of Hawaii, stating that the shipment of flowers made on November 22 arrived in Honolulu in excellent condition.

Mr. L. A. Whitney, to whom the flowers were sent comments upon the fact that no ice was used in packing and to this he attributes the success of the experiment. He says that shipments occassionally are received from the mainland but are always packed in ice and do not hold up.

Some very valuable suggestions are offered by Mr. Whitney for the information of prospective shippers. Cut flowers should be carefully inspected before shipping to ascertain if an insect pests are present. Even the presence of ants or aphids, which are not considered serious in the states, would cause the flowers to be destroyed in Honolulu as, under their climatic conditions, there they prove a very injurious pest.

The flowers shipped were donated by y. W. McClellan Company of Burlingame and A. Watanabe of Redwood City, and were forwarded through the courtesy of the Dollar Steamship Line and the Pacific Commercial Company.

NO MERCY PROMISED TARDY LICENSE BUYERS

SACRAMENTO, January 5—Bulletins instructing all branch offices of the Division of Motor Vehicles that no extension of time will be granted any California motorist who fails to make application for his 1928 license plates before January 31st were issued here today by Frank G. Snook, chief of the division.

No person, no matter what his excuse, will be permitted to avoid payment of the 100 percent penalty, if his application is not placed in the mails before midnight of that date, the bulletin said.

"Grant no extensions to anyone," the bulletin said. "There will be absolutely no reason for any person being delinquent with his application.

"There seems to be a general assumpton among some of the motorists that they will be permitted to come in after the legal renewal period expires and get plates at the old price. This is absolutely erroneous. The law requires a double fee after January 31st, and a double fee will be required."

Snook supplemented his bulletin with the statement that the simplest and easiest way to make application is to take the certificate of registration from the car, place it in an envelope with the amount of the fee in check, bank draft, or money order and mail them to Sacramento. He advised that changes of address should be shown on the certificate.

The motor vehicle chief explained that his drastic order against extensions was made largely because the Division opened its counters two weeks earlier this year in order to give every motorist a chance to avoid the legal penalites.

Three Killed When Car Crashes Into Bus

When a car driven by Frank O'Connell of 2440 Market street, San Francisco crashed into the side of one of the Pacific Auto Stages' crowded busses at Belmont Monday evening evening, one of the worst wrecks which has occured in this county's highways took place. The crash resulted in the death of three persons and the injuring of many others.

The bus was driven by E. Trude and had left Palo Alto at 8:30 in the evening. It had proceeded north as far as Belmont, when the car driven by O'Connell suddenly turned out to pass another car. Instead of turning in again, O'Connell's car shot across the highway and crashed into the side of the bus, splintering the side of the heavy machine.

One of the dead was Mrs. Joseph Abney, a passenger of the O'Connell car, the others were passengers on the bus. The Community hospital was taxed by the sudden influx of injured resulting from the wreck. Many of the passengers of the bus were very seriously injured and Mrs. O'Connell, wife of the driver of the car is still in a critical condition from injuries received.

Holy Land Trees Sent Out by State

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, January 5 — California is about to undertake distribution of a second allotment of its only tree even remotely linked with the Holy Land.

Under direction of State Forester M. B. Pratt, more than 250 Gethsemane cypress secured by the state nursery near Davis from Professor Woodbridge Metcalf, state extension forester, will be sent to practically that many churches on the waiting list since demand exceeded the first supply a year ago.

The tees were grown from seeds which Ansel F. Hall, naturalist of the natural park service securd from trees growing in the garden of Jeruselem, which, tradition says, was the scene of sorrowful introspection preliminary to his seizure, crucifiction and crucifixion. While called Gethsemane cypress, the species really is of Italian origin, and may date back to plantings by crusaders.

Better Health Longer Life
GORGAS MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

ARE YOU A NOSE BLOWER?

By L. W. Oaks, M. D.
Provo, Utah
Member Gorgas Memorial

(The following is one of a series of articles prepared under the direction of the Gorgas Memorial as part of its Better Health and Longer Life program. President Coolidge is the honorary president of the Memorial, which has been organized and endowed by prominent doctors and laymen throught the country to perpetuate the work of the late Major-General Gorgas in preventing unnecessary illness. Headquarters of the Gorgas Memorial are at 400 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.)

Improper blowing of the nose perhaps brings about as much needless suffering as is occasioned by any simple thing we do.

Leading off from the airway of the nose are small openings that connect with the sinuses. These sinuses are hollow cavities in the bones of the cranium; and they are lined by delicate mucous membrane much like that in the nose. The pressure in these cavities is kept equal with the outside air pressure through the small openings into the nose.

Anything that interferes with proper breathing through the nose favors the occurrence of sinus infection. So does influenza, where the individual fails to remain in bed long enough to insure complete recovery from the disease. These factors are important, but it is quite likely that blowing of the nose is responsible for very many more case of sinus disease than both of them combined.

An individual has no inclination to blow his nose unless there is material that he desires to expel from the airways. This secretio only occurs as the result of irritation, which usually means infection. In order to eject the offending mucus, a person naturally feels that he must send a current of air through the nostril, under pressure. Consequently he closes one side entirely, or both sides partially, and suddenly blows a powerful blast of air into the nose from behind. With the nostrils closed or made much smaller, the force of the air blast greatly increases the pressure within the airways of the nose. A circumstance is created in which the air pressure greatly exceeds that in the sinuses.

Under such conditions—that is, where infection or irritation is present—there are practically always small particles of muscus hanging about the regions of the sinus openings, and these invariably carry millions of bacteria. The greater pressure in the nose causes a sudden inrush of air through the small apertures into sinuses. Naturally this current carries with it, into the cavities, some of the particles of secretion. Once arrived in the sinuses, the minute bacteria find darkness, warmth, moisture, and food—all of the conditions necessary to their greatest growth and activity. Infection results. The consequent inflammation causes swelling that closes entirely the small gateways to the nose; pus forms, and as there is no place for drainage of the pas away, it develops under increasing tension whch gives the excruciating pain oftem suffered in this condition.

So long as we do not get bacteria into the sinuses, we have no trouble with them; but when infection occurs there we pay dearly in pain and poor health, for any carelessness by which we may have promoted the trouble. If one believes that blowing of the nose is absolutely necessary to the maintenance of bodily comfort, one should at least learn to blow it with both nostrils widely open. It is then not nearly so likely that harm will result. The closing of one nostril is no less dangerous than the partial closure of both.

Must Publish Better Papers

Weekly Newspaper Called Big Factor

By CLEM WHITAKER.

SACRAMENTO, January 5—"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," some ancient sage once remarked.

But in this modern era, when mother rocks the steering wheel and her child pedals through baby hood on a scooter-bike, the editor of the weekly newspaper comes nearest to ruling the world.

Such, at least, is the conviction of State Printer Carroll Smith. Because of his profession, the state printer may be considered a prejudiced witness, but the fact that he is associated in the management of four weekly newspapers in San Diego county might, on the other hand, give his remarks the authority of "expert testimony."

The editor of a vigorous, well-edited country weekly newspaper in California can have far more influence for good in his community than the clergy, the teaching profession, or any other single group, asserts Smith. The unprincipled editor, on the contrary, can distribute more poison in the community than the most flagrant bootlegger, but Smith did not make this bald assertion.

Furthermore, State Printer Smith makes the bold declaration that California's big metropolitan dailies, are less thoroughly read and have less prestige, proportionately speaking, than their modest competitors of the weekly field.

The weekly publications, too, far outnumber the dailies, with a total of 457 in the state, as against 144 daily papers. And even in circulation, the weeklies are formidable, though they naturally fail to supply the number of readers served by the dailies. The weeklies, to be exact, have a combined circulation of 641,715, according to Smith's survey, while the dailies claim 2,321,571.

"The weekly newspaper," said State Printer Smith, "is read from cover to cover. It carries news about people the readers know, about situations they appreciate from personal contact. And every advertiser knows, if he checks his results, that weekly paper brings greater results for each unit of circulation than the average daily.

"If the editor is on to his job, alert to the needs of his community and willing to lead the battle for better things, he is more powerful than any other man in his community. The smallest weekly, for instance, will have a circulation of at least 500, while more than 200 or 300 with his sermon. And in most cities with far less than that."

But the country editor must publish a better newspaper than he published in the old days, if he would hold his circulation and influence, declared Simth. Readers are becoming more critical. They have learned to distinguish between live news and "filler."

In California, the state official stated, there is a decided trend toward strong weeklies in many fields, as opposed to weak dailies. And even in metropolitan territory, the weeklies are flourishing like the green bay tree

Food for Thought
What is the definition of a sure-thing?
Something you can bank upon!
For instance:
Can you always bank upon having good health? Well, hardly.
And yet, uncertainties in matters of health, are of all things the most harmful. It is easy to see why. Because any reduction in normal health tends to affect all other interests.
Health has a vital bearing on everything we do. Its importance cannot be overemphasized.
The CHIROPRACTOR COMES TO YOU WITH A STRAIGHTFORWARD PROPOSITION FOR SAFEGUARDING YOUR HEALTH. Something in the nature of a sure-thing. He can give you the nearest guarantee to good health that it is possible for science to do.
Considering the above statements in a broad and serious way, does it not appear wise to look into the claims of this great Drugless Scence?
In the long run, and in its best sense CHIROPRACTIC is a sure-thing that you can depend upon.
Will you make it your business to find out why, at once?

Idle Island

By ETHEL HUESTON

Copyright 1927 by The Bobbs-Merrill Co. WNU Service.

STORY FROM THE START

On the verge of nervous collapse, due to overwork, Gay Delane, successful New York artist, seeks rest at Idle Island. She rents a cottage, the "Lone Pine," from an island character, the "Captain," and his sister, Alice Andover, "administrator." Gay finds the cottage is tenanted by an elderly lady, "Auntaimiry," who consents to move to another abode, the "Apple Tree." Awaking from sleep, Gay imagines she sees the face of a Chinaman peering in the window. On an exploration of the island Gay, standing on the seashore, is horrified by the appearance of the drifting body of a drowned man, which she nerves herself to bring to the shore. A bullet wound in the temple shows the man to have been murdered. Gay makes her way to the 'Captain' with the story. Returning with him to the shore, they find no body there, and Gay's story of the incident is set down to an attack of "nerves." Gay, unable to convince her neighbors of the truth, draws a picture of the face of the dead man, intending to send it to the authorities. She meets a stranger, apparently another visitor, to whom she tells the story and shows the picture. He asks her to let him take it, but Gay refuses. Next day, after a night spent with "Auntaimiry," Gay finds the picture has been taken from the cottage.

"There you have me in a nutshell. The island dynamiter, burner and bomber. Got anybody you want blown up? Rand's home."

"Rand who?" she asked. Gay was amazed, that having heard the words a hundred times, "When Rand comes home," she had never felt sufficient interest to inquire, "And who is Rand?" Many times again would Gay Delane hear those words, but never again without a thrill of personal interest, hope and joy.

"Rand Wallace."

"Oh, you're another Wallace."

"I am not only another Wallace, I am a whole section of them. The Wallaces run in branches. I'm the third branch. All the other branches dwindle off into uncles and aunts, and nephews, sons and cousins. But I'm a whole series all by myself. It's quite a distinction."

Gay laughed as she pressed the electric button that turned the heat into her tea kettle.

"We'll have a party," she said. "We're so glad Rand's home. And while we are waiting for the water to boil—tell me, where does your series fit into the tout ensemble of House Wallace?"

Randolph Wallace's version of the family history, a very facetious, flippant and slangy version, began with the first Captain Wallace who was his great-grandfather. The present Captain, he explained carefully, was really his great-uncle, although he called him Gramp, because, as he explained, "all the other Wallaces call him Gramp, and it avoids confusion." The administrator, Mrs. Alice Andover, was his great-aunt.

"Your voice, except that it has some expressiveness, is rather state of Maine," Gay said thoughtfully. "But you do not seem like the others. You are different."

"My father committed a faux pas," he confessed. "He married an actress from New York who was up here with the actors' summer colony one year. I," he said slowly, "I am the combustion that results from the union of Manhattan and the state of Maine.—It has been a warning to the whole state," he added modestly.

"Your parents—" Gay prompted, enthralled with his flippant tale.

"We were all out in a boat together. I can sort of remember it, though I was a baby. Sudden squall—boat went over— Strange, isn't it? They were both strong, able-bodied, good swimmers, used to the sea. I was a baby. But I floated ashore in my mother's arms. She was dead, my father was dead. But Rand came home."

"Oh, that is very sad." Gay's eyes had darkened with her ready sympathy, her slim hands twisted together.

He smiled at her. To hide her sudden emotion, Gay turned quickly to the serving of tea.

But her desire for information about this surprising person was limitless. She wanted to know about his education, where he had gone to school.

The grammar grades in the island schoolhouse, it seemed, he had persisted doggedly through, and took a great deal of quiet satisfaction in explaining that the three missing bricks beneath the window on the southeast corner had been removed by his own hands at the age of nine years, to facilitate his departure from the seat of learning when the teacher reached for the well-known educational birch branch. The entire high school course he had encompassed, if not with honor, at least without serious mishap, in the city of Portland.

"And then, darned if I didn't go to college," he told her. "But don't blame me. I had to go. My late lamented Grandfather Wallace put it into his will that I couldn't inherit until I went to college. Left me an infant in arms, as you might say, the arms of a guardian. Guess who? The administrator, darn her. That's what got her so stuck on administrating, she did such a good job with me."

"It wouldn't hurt you to go to college."

"Going to college would be simple enough. I had to go through.—I did.—Bowdoin. I hated to go there, I was afraid I'd turn out a poet, I thought it was required for graduation. But Gramp was dead set on Bowdoin. Well, I went. It did me no harm. I've never even written vers libre. Though sometimes I feel it come over me all of a sudden—I feel it now when I look at you."

Gay frowned at him, but he smiled disarmingly. His was a pleasant smile. His lips were thin, their curve half-cynical, half-humorous, very sensitive. The vaunted mustache was but a shadowy outlining fringe. His skin had been fair no doubt, save for the rich coat of tan that covered him. His hands were hard and brown, small for their strength, smaller than her own, she noticed quickly.

When he said at last, reluctantly, that he must go and see Auntaimiry she went with him to the door.

"Come again," she told him pleasantly; "come often."

"I feel myself slipping," he said sadly, "slipping. However, I am no coward. I'll come."

Later in the evening, Gay went down to the Pier grocery store. On every lip was the laughing word, "Rand's home." But whereas before she had taken no notice, now she experienced acute interest, paused breathless at the name, and drank in every word that fell from native lips on the subject of Randolph Wallace. The combustion of the union between Manhattan and the state of Maine was not entirely approved on the island, she gathered, but altogether loved, although the island never openly acknowledges its loves.

As the dusk fell she went out, alone, unafraid into the little whispering forest, and walked up and down, slowly, deep in thought. The island seemed changed to her, warmer, softer. She felt vaguely troubled, vaguely pleased, strangely stirred. When her thoughts turned to the amazing young man and her surprising encounter with him her lips curved into tremulous smiles and her eyes brightened with pleased expectancy. She shook her head at herself warningly. She was not deceived. She knew these symptoms. She liked but feared them also.

For the first time, the practical boyishness of her costume was distasteful to her, and when she got up on the morning after Rand's return, for the first time since she came to the island she discarded her knickers and silken shirt. Half ashamed of the instinct that prompted her, but none the less obedient to its guiding, she took from her trunk a costume that was one of her chief treasures, a studio pajama suit, patterned after an improved Japanese style, all in black and fairy blue, the trousers long and wide, the coat, which was really an over-blouse reaching to the knees, richly embroidered, all soft lines and delicate curves. With dainty blue and gold slippers and sheer silken hose, it was a delectable studio concoction, designed for theatrical effect, inspired for the enravishment of an audience.

Gay changed her easel, considering now not so much the allowance of good light for her work as unobstructed view for herself, and sat where by the slightest turn of her eyes she could command the entire slope to the orchard below, and the lane that led from the pier to the Captain's house. Whoever ventured forth, must pass that way.

At ten minutes to eleven he came down jauntily and crossed into the orchard. Gay leaned forward. Did he turn left to the Apple Tree? No, straight toward the Lone Pine he made his way. Once he stopped to pick and taste and toss away a little green apple. Again he paused, to answer the eager calls of the boys at the pier. But he came on.

He came to a sudden halt outside the window, and stood a moment, spellbound. She looked up, then, and smiled.

"You are blotting out my sunshine," she said.

"I fondly hoped that I was bringing it," he returned impudently. "Don't get up. I always come right in."

He suited action to his words, and came and sat in the window-seat close to her elbow. Gay turned about in her chair and regarded him pleasantly.

"Is Auntaimiry here?" he asked apologetically.

"No, she isn't. Isn't she at the Apple Tree?"

"Well, I didn't really stop to see. I thought I'd better inquire here first. So she isn't here. Dear, dear, all that long walk for nothing."

"Not for nothing. I am just going to have my breakfast, and you shall have coffee with me."

Without moving from her chair, Gay swung up a wide tray that hung to the wall, and connected the electric toaster.

As she gave him a cup of coffee their fingers touched, and their eyes met lingeringly. Rand's speculatively smiling, Gay's a little cloudy.

As they drank their coffee slowly, she studied him furtively, noted his easy slouch in the comfortable window-seat, marked the brown arm on the window-seat. But she avoided meeting the merry gray eyes beneath the dark up-curling lashes.

"Do you flirt, Mr. Wallace?" she asked suddenly.

"Hope to tell you I do," he answered warmly.

"Oh! Then you need no warning. We have quite a wicked little flirt in the neighborhood, and I was going to warn you. But since you do, you can take care of yourself."

"Oh, I thought you meant yourself. I thought it was a sort of 'Help Wanted,' like the newspaper ads. I was willing to apply."

Again the friendly, smiling silence.

To one like Gay, whose religion was work, whose god accomplishment, it came as a distinct shock to know that this one, with the strong hands, the ready wit and the smiling eyes, was an idler, a dawdler on the face of the earth, that he had no profession and wanted none, no business and was glad of it, no ambition and delighted in its absence. He called himself a retired gentleman, and said it was a poor Island that couldn't support at least one; in fact, he said, the entire state of Maine united to support him.

"But don't you do anything? You don't just loaf, do you?"

"Loaf! Certainly not. Bums loaf. Landed gentlemen—retire."

Gay scrutinized him gravely, remarked the muscular arms, the straight shoulders, the vigorous tan, the deep and understanding eyes. And he was an idler in this rugged land!

She shook her head regretfully. "A world full of things to be done," she said slowly. "And you do nothing."

He explained that for ten weeks he had been doing the coast of Canada with a photographer in a fishing schooner, getting pictures. He had returned to the island to finish up a little work he was doing on a motor launch, for Bemis, a lumber man at Bangor. He was to get the boat ready, and with a couple of men as crew, take it to Miami in readiness for Bemis when he went down for the winter season later on. He had expected to finish the job on the island, he said, in three days, but now he was beginning to feel it would take him a week.

He said he had gone with MacMillan on one of his trips to the Arctic, had been to the Arctic circle twice, in fact, but he didn't like it. Said it was too cold. Wished somebody would plant the next pole in Florida or Mexico, nice warm place to look for things. He had been in the World war, and served overseas seven months. He said he did not like that either.

"Why not?" Gay was a little bitter. "Were you afraid? Or are you a pacifist? Or perhaps you had to get up too early in the morning?"

"No. I didn't mind those things. It was the uniform. I couldn't stand the uniform. The collar made my neck itch. My neck itched for fifteen months without stopping. One gets tired of it, that's all."

Gay's eyes were dark. She felt saddened. This aimless, planless, hopeless, dear young man violated her highest ideals, outraged her finest feelings. He was utterly impossible, she told herself furiously. But when her eyes met his, involuntarily she smiled. Impossible, but how pleasant to have him there in the window-seat at her side, drinking her coffee, smiling at her with the dark gray eyes beneath those softly curling lashes.

Ridiculous, she said to herself, that a man should have gray eyes and curly lashes.

Ridiculous, but something very disturbing, rather sweet, about it when one caught the full bright friendly glance of them.

CHAPTER V

Randolph Wallace indeed stood for everything in the world of which Gay Delane professedly disapproved. It was not merely that he did not work, but he disapproved of it on principle. He objected vigorously to the enthronement of Doing, which was Gay's god. He declared stoutly that labor in itself was a childish, ineffective thing, that the need for it was a confession of inferiority, that joy in accomplishment was not merely the last word in selfishness, but was also the sure mark of a narrow nature, lacking vision.

He asked Gay why she had never married.

"Because there is so much to do," she cried intensely. "Because I want to accomplish something in the world, get something done. Because I want to work, work hard, and work well.—Why don't you?" she ended mildly.

"Because life is too rare and fine a thing to be devoted to the mere grimy physical effort of doing this or doing that. Soul is too frail and too delicate to be enslaved in the chains of daily toil for board and keep."

Half the time, she realized that he was only laughing at her, making fun. But always she felt an undertone of serious conviction in what he said, always she felt in him the inherent yearning of pure spirit for freedom, more freedom, always more. Work, he declared, was confining, success was pinioning, ambition the sternest slave-driver in the universe. Only in thought, desire, the soul was free.

Gay chafed restlessly at his easy indolence, his serene and apparently imperturbable calm. She knew that he could work, that, on occasion, he did work, desperately, both hard and well, with mind, with soul, with body. And more than that, he liked it. It was only the compulsion to work that he decried.

Iconoclasm

We get pretty mad at the earnest, go-getting talk about modern efficiency in charity, as if the two things were compatible, but that expression, selling religion, makes us madder than anything else in this whole, wide, beautiful world, bar none, which is saying a good deal.—Ohio State Journal.

Football Most Brutal Sport

Gene Tunney.

"COLLEGE football is more brutal than boxing," Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, told members of the Men's club of the Lafayette Reformed church in Jersey City. Tunney was the guest of Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey.

"I attended a football game in Washington recently," said Gene, "and I saw five men knocked out clean. All of them required the attendance of surgeons and were revived. I never saw such a spectacle in boxing."

The champion declared that injuries received in football were often apparent twenty years later. "Injuries sustained in scrimmage," he said, "are more permanent than those received in boxing."

The reason why brutality goes unnoticed in football, according to Tunney, is that the spectators are too busy watching the ball to be worried about what happens to the men. In boxing, he said, the eyes of the crowd were upon the men; hence staggering blows and subsequent injuries were thrown into the spotlight.

In football, according to Dempsey's conqueror, the men followed the coaches' ideas or were removed from the game. In boxing it was up to the individual to rely on himself, he said.

When the champion had finished contrasting football and boxing to the detriment of the former he launched into a discussion of the history of pugilism. Appropriately enough, he began with mention of pugilism by Homer in the "Iliad." From this point in remote antiquity he followed the sport through Pompeii and the Roman days to the present.

Before going to Jersey City Tunney turned out to be the lion of the evening at an entertainment featuring some of the highest luminaries of the literary and theatrical worlds given by the Authors' League of America at the Roosevelt hotel for the benefit of the league's funds for needy writers.

Impeccably attired in evening clothes, with a dress tie knotted just right over a gorgeous expanse of white shirt front, Tunney fought a battle with woman novelists and short story writers who seized his hands and tugged at his arms or coat lapels and pulled him about the room while gushing introductions to their friends.

Modern Grid Training Real Strenuous Ordeal

Training for college football is a serious thing nowadays. A man going out to make his eleven must often sacrifice his ambitions in the field of baseball, basket ball and other sports.

Of course the man who has won his letter in three major sports still exists, but he is becoming rarer and is found mainly at the smaller institutions, where athletic competition is not so stiff.

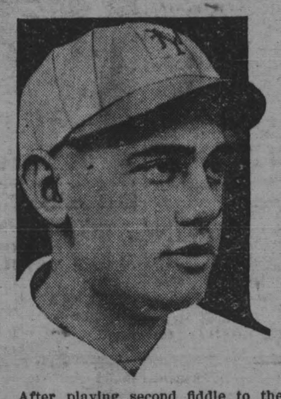
Big colleges, and little ones, too, for that matter, have spring practice. There are summer occupations of arduous work to keep in condition. There is the early autumn session of intensive training at a camp or secluded establishment.

Also there are the regular practice sessions and the informal practice sessions; there are the matters of clothes, sleep, associates, mental attitude. On top of all is the coaching system.

In the football season the day of the members of the squad begins usually about 7 a. m., the men having breakfast at the training table. The rest of the morning and early afternoon is given over to studies and lectures.

Practice begins some time between 3 and 5 p. m., depending upon the scholastic program. Nearly every coach gets two hours or more of work out of the members of his squad every weekday, and several coaches are resorting to night practice, using either a "ghost" ball, the leather being painted white, or powerful arc lights overhead.

Tower of Strength



After playing second fiddle to the incomparable George Kelly at first base for four years, Memphis Bill Terry finally got his chance last spring to play regular for the Giants. He played the game of his life and was a tower of strength to McGraw.

Mule Shirely Regained in Trade by Griffmen

Ernest (Mule) Shirley, the North Carolina university first-base product, who received quite a thorough inspection with the Griffmen a few years ago, has been brought back into the fold.

President Clark Griffith announces that Shirley has been obtained in a trade with the Rochester club, in which the International leaguers get title to Shortstop Dubby Dear, who joined the Nationals last summer, straight from the campus of Virginia Polytechnic institute.

Shirley, a left-hand thrower who bats in the orthodox fashion, last season was farmed to Greenville, where he helped that club win the South Atlantic league pennant, clouting some 31 home runs in the process of registering a very respectable batting average. He is to be retained as understudy to Joe Judge, regular vestibule guardian and tire dispenser.

Moore Wins Title

Ted Moore of England defeated Frank Moody of Wales on points recently in a 20-round bout for the British middleweight championship. The bout was staged at the National Sporting club and the prince of Wales was a spectator. The prince showed no signs of his hunting mishap earlier in the day. He received a tremendous ovation from the crowd, composed largely of Welshmen, who were delighted when Moody rose and sang the Welsh anthem on the arrival of the prince.

JEFFRIES STOPPED CORBETT IN CAMP

Previously Unwritten Chapter of History Disclosed.

Disclosing a bit of previously unwritten fight history, Jim Jeffries, in a chapter on his career, published in a recent issue of Liberty, relates how he knocked out Jim Corbett while the latter was preparing for the fight in which he lost the heavyweight title to Bob Fitzsimmons in 1887.

The knockout, as Jeffries tells the story, occurred when he first put the gloves on with Corbett in the latter's training camp at Carson City, Nev. Accounts of the meeting at that time and since, however, has credited Corbett with knocking out Jeffries, then a raw but powerful youngster recruited from a Los Angeles boiler shop to serve as a sparring partner for Corbett.

"Corbett didn't knock me out; I knocked him out," Jeffries is quoted as saying.

"The story that he knocked me out was just a ballyhoo for the fight—to worry Fitzsimmons and boost Corbett's stock by crediting him with a knockout punch. Delaney (Corbett's manager) told me to say nothing and to be sure not to contradict it if anyone asked me and I never did."

According to Jeffries' version of the affair, which occurred behind locked doors, his temper was aroused by an attempt to have him expose his chin for a knockout blow from Corbett.

They wanted to see if Corbett had a punch and they got me to step in and leave my chin uncovered while he took a punch at me. It made me mad to know I'd been tricked. My lip was cut against my teeth, but Corbett never knew it. I rushed him and mixed for a minute, then I got a punch over. I hit him and knocked him against the wall so hard he nearly went through.

"Then I pasted him a couple of good ones to keep him there and his hands dropped. He was done for and another punch would have finished him. They rushed in and pulled me away and gave me time to cool off. There wasn't any more boxing that day."

John Heisman to Retire as Coach of Football

With the close of the 1927 gridiron campaign rounding out a coaching career of 36 years, John W. Heisman, athletic director and head football coach at Rice institute at Houston, Texas, has announced his retirement. With the exception of Alonzo A. Stagg of the University of Chicago, no man has coached football longer than Heisman.

The veteran announced his resignation at a banquet of Rice students. The resignation has been accepted and while the sixty-year-old mentor did not outline his plans for the future, he indicated he had coached his last football team.

Before coming to Rice, Heisman coached for several years at Georgia Tech, including 1917 when the Golden Tornado ranked as one of the country's leading elevens.

Jockey Hardy Now Holds World's Record for Wins

"Longshot" Hardy, a lad of eighteen, with only one year's experience in the saddle, holds the world's record for winning mounts on thoroughbred horses for a single season by virtue of riding to victory in 207 races.

Previous records were held by Ivan Parke, with 205 winners, and Guy Garner, with 203.

Hardy is the third jockey to cross 200 in the history of the American turf. He broke in on Ohio tracks in 1926 and was several months getting his first winner home. This happened on September 30, 1926, at Columbus.

Last spring Hardy began riding on Chicago tracks, almost unknown, and became a sensation almost overnight. C. E. "Boots" Durnell purchased Hardy's contract for $12,000, and Hardy has since been riding for the Three D's stable, managed by Durnell for E. T. Waggoner, Texas millionaire.

McNally Hits Homers

Joe McNally, during his major league career, came to bat 1,037 times and made but one home run. In 1925 and 1926 Joe shifted his activities to the Western league, where he blossomed out as a home-run hitter, getting 32 and 25 homers in those years. He also hit out 19 last season. Joe has all the signs of a coming home-run lord. It might be the hurlers of the minor leagues are easier or, perhaps, the fences are nearer the home plate.

The general purpose of the Daniel Guggenheim Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics, Inc., may be broadly defined as follows: To promote aeronautical education, both academic and general; to assist in the extension of fundamental aeronautical science, to assist in the development of commercial aircraft and aircraft equipment; to further the application of aircraft in business, industry and other economic and social activities of the nation.

Only One-Eyed Creature

The only one-eyed animal in existence is the cyclops, a genus of small fresh-water crustacean. They are popularly included under the generic title of "water fleas." Various species are common as active swimmers in fresh-water pools, or slow-flowing brooks and a few forms have been recorded from the sea. A very marked feature to which the name refers is the single radium eye, usually bright crimson and sparkling like a gem.—Washington Star.

Then What Did He Get?

Three-year-old James cared not a little for the freshly baked cake which his mother was taking from the oven. "The little one is yours, James," she said, as she hurried to answer a telephone call. When she returned to the kitchen her dismay was evident when she said, "Why, James, what has happened to my cake?" "It was too long. I breaked off the end for you, mother," was his answer.—Indianapolis News.

How Crops Are Hastened

Lettuce was ready for market in March from an outdoor garden in Sweden this year, a result of heating the soil with electricity. That the product may be matured earlier is considered a probability and further tests are planned. A main object is to obtain a ground temperature which will correspond to the comparatively high air temperature in spring and summer.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Long-Life Trees

The white oak, button-wood, white pine and hemlock are long-lived trees, says the American Tree association, and the poplars, willows, some cherries, and a few oaks are short-lived. Some of the sequoias of California exceed the 3,000-year mark, and the big cypress trees of Tule growing in the state of Oaxaca, Mexico, has been estimated from 4,500 to 5,000 years.

Period of Growth

Not all trees begin to grow at the same time. Some begin early in spring, while others delay much of their growth until late April or early May, says the American Tree association. The wild black cherry comes about the first of April, while the tulip tree or yellow poplar does not begin until late in April, and the hemlock way spruce waits until early in May.

No Royal Road

"The hardest way is almost invariably the best way," said Thomas A. Edison; and he went on to explain that whenever he achieved a result quickly and easily he always found it and proceeded to test it by a different and more difficult method. The road to the heights must be steep and toilsome.—Youth's Companion.

No Free-Will Offering

Little Douglas came over to the house with his mother. My mother had made cookies and put frosting on them but hadn't put them on plates. He asked for one. His mother asked, "Did you thank the lady?" The astonishing reply was: "She didn't offer it to me; I asked for it."—Youth's Companion.

SHE WENT FROM BAD TO WORSE

Down to 98 Pounds—Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cleveland, Ohio.—"After having my first baby, I lost weight, so much that I did. The doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I got worse, was always going down in weight, went down to 98 pounds. My mother told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helped her very much so I tried it. After taking four bottles I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble."—Mrs. M. Rissinger, 1006½ Superior Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

The Tiny Oyster

Oysters are so small when they are born that they cannot be seen without a microscope. After birth they allow themselves to be carried about by the water until they are a week or so old and then settle down in the bottom where they fasten themselves to rocks or logs. Oysters have been cultivated for at least 2,000 years.

American Colony Moving to Egypt

Will Try Living Under Ancient Laws.

San Francisco. — Five thousand American men, women and children plan to move to an ancient Egyptian city by the Nile and prove they can live there harmoniously and progressively without benefit of modern conveniences. This was the announcement made by Dr. H. Spencer Lewis, national president of the Rosecrucian Order, a philosophical cult.

Doctor Lewis declared plans were being made to have the expedition sail late next year.

The city of Tel-el-Amarna, sun city of Amenhotep the fourth, founder of the Rosecrucian Order, is the site picked for the experiment, Doctor Lewis said. The expedition will contain an approximate even number of men and women, all carefully selected for their physical fitness and devotion to the principles of the teachings under which they are to live.

"There will also be several children," Doctor Lewis said. "Establishment of families will be encouraged."

The colony will abandon modern dress for costume of the ancient Egyptians and will forsake mechanical implements for the crude tools of 1300 B. C. They are to live according to the principles propounded by Amenhotep in an effort to demonstrate that these laws have not lost their value for the human race.

Reopening of Old Mines Spooky Job for Workers

McAdoo, Pa.—Days when miners worked for 90 cents a day instead of the present minimum of $5.30 daily were recalled at Sayre colliery, between here and Mt. Carmel, recently, when the old Aristes section of the Sayre mines was reopened. Idle for 40 years, during which time the workings were allowed to collapse and timbers to decay, the presence of coal that could not be recovered in the days of primitive mining has resulted in the Lehigh Valley Coal company arranging to again work the gangways and to pull the pillars left when the mine was abandoned two generations ago.

Miners find this reopening of old workings a "spooky" task and do not like it. Taking the water out after 40 years leaves long strands of chemical "slush" hanging from the roofs and when the miners walk into these hangings in the dark they get a thrill that is hard to stand.

At Aristes slope they found a car of coal that had been loaded by miners who left it in the workings and never took it out, nor were paid for it. Standing in acid mine water for 40 years did not destroy the vehicle. One wheel was corroded through and the tracks on which it stood still are there, rusty streaks, but still some metal in them. Pipes of miners who walked out and forgot their belongings also have been discovered and even dinner cans, containing moldy bread and meat, have been found.

"Mute" Given Hearing

"Talked" in Pantomime Until Taken to School.

Indianapolis.—Whether a sturdy little youngster brought to them as a mute is really deaf and lacking the powers of speech, as his parents believe, is a matter which teachers of School No. 9, Vermont and Davidson streets, are trying to determine through methods employed in the atypical department of the institution.

The child, who is six, too young to enter the Indiana School for the Deaf, was brought by his parents, both mutes, to the school in hope that he might be educated. His two sisters are mutes, and because the two always talked in pantomime, he was thought also to be a mute. He was put in charge of a teacher in the room known as atypical ,B which is provided for beginning pupils who are particularly backward and unable to keep pace with the average child of that age.

Finds Boy Can Hear.

The first thing the teacher learned was that the boy could hear, though with some difficulty. This led her to believe that he might be taught to articulate. The fact that he never had, might be attributed to a psychological rather than a physical cause, she believed, inasmuch as all his life he had been associated with mutes.

On the assumption that the child could be taught to understand and express himself in the English language, the teacher first began instruction in lip-reading. As a pupil, he showed unusual attentiveness and quickness of perception. Within nine days he had learned the meaning of nearly a score of words which he understood from the motion of the teacher's lips. Heretofore, he could comprehend ideas only through pantomime such as he employed.

Assured of success in this direction, the teacher set about determining how much the youngster could hear. She found that he responded to sound. As she continued to work with him, his hearing seemed to grow better and now he hears sufficiently to understand four words — "boy," "girl," "shoe" and his name. In order to explain to his teacher just how he heard and felt the sound of a piano note when she struck it, he pointed first to the floor, then his shoe, his body and his ear.

Shows Normal Tendencies.

In meeting the problem of teaching him to talk, the teacher first began by saying and in turn having him pronounce after her three vowels. This he does with an enunciation that is surprising in view of his history. She has forbidden him to attempt to say words, as his parents have tried to get him to do in their unintelligible way.

That the youngster has a keen sense of humor is evinced in his association with his teacher whom he has learned to love and obey eagerly, and with his classmates. He is endowed with the usual tendencies of the normal American boy to put himself in the right. When he got in a fight recently with a taller boy in the room in the teacher's absence, he made it evident in pantomime gestures to the school principal, Miss Kate Mason, that the bigger boy pushed him down, forcing him to defend himself.

The case is being watched with considerable interest by the school. Whether the teacher and Miss Jeanette Williams, in charge of the atypical work of the city schools, have correctly analyzed the situation and whether their efforts meet with success remain to be seen within the next few months.

Two Things Combined to Spoil Lafe's Swap

"Whilst I was in Torpidity tuther day I come mighty nigh swapping for a dog," related Lafe Lagg of Booger Holler. "In front of the New York store I met a feller that bantered me for a trade. "'Say, looky yur!' says I to the dogman, 'I don't reckon I want to swap with you for no dog. I hain't no-ways shore that the gent over across the street hain't one that you've swapped with before.'"

"Then the gent let slam with his gun ag'in and another gent came tumbling out of the winder and fell on the sidewalk in front of me. The dog lit out around the corner.

"One of every five persons in United States owns an automobile," according to figures printed in Barron's Financial Weekly. "A world survey shows a car to every 66 persons," reads Barron's. "About 95 per cent, or 27,650,267, or all cars registered were of American manufacture. Time Plays Wonders

Time works wonders in book values as well as many other things. When the first edition of 250 copies of FitzGerald's "Rubaiyat" was published in 1859 it proved what in modern slang is called a flop. The disgusted publisher finally put the books out on the pavement and offered them for eight cents each. Now a well-preserved copy of that edition is worth an even thousand dollars.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Improved Agricultural Condition Is Reported.

Washington.—Continuation of the improved agricultural situation as compared with last year was announced by the Department of Agriculture to be in progress recently when a review of conditions was made.

"The general course of prices of farm products has been slightly downward recently," the review said, "but other commodities have also declined slightly, so that the October index of purchasing power of farm products in terms of non-agricultural commodities remained at 92 per cent of pre-war, compared with 81 per cent in October last year."

The general yield of crops has been brought up above the ten-year average by the mild fall weather, it was stated, but production this year is about 3 per cent less than last year.

Discussing the situation by regions, the department said weather in the East had been favorable for fall work and wheat was reported to be showing good stands.

Drought in the eastern part of the South has made germination and growth of winter crops very poor, as was also the case to some extent in Texas. The Middle Southern states have been more favored and the general condition of the South is apparently improved over last year.

Much soft corn is reported in the eastern portion of the corn belt, some of which, it was stated, will not even make feed. General conditions in the winter wheat belt are reported the best in five or six years in the North, but not greatly different from last year in the southern part of the belt.

"The range country is going into winter, for the most part, with an abundance of feed and with stock in excellent condition," said the department.

"The cattle industry shows every evidence of stimulation; restocking ranges, cows high priced, good income from this fall's shipments of both feeder and slaughter stock.

"The sheep industry likewise is optimistic. Western feeding areas running twice as many lambs as last year. The whole picture for the mountain states is a favorable one."

HAVING THE DRAG

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

GIBLER had been dropped from college for poor scholarship in accordance with the regulations which prevailed, and he was mourning the fact and racking his brains for some adequate alibi which would give him reason for applying for readmission. It was not that he had made the most of his opportunities or that he had been the victim of ill-luck or sudden misfortune, he had simply been caught asleep at the switch. It was the end of the semester and most of the fellows had gone home.

"If Tom Johnson were only here," Gibler remarked, "I'd be able to get by all right."

"How come?" his roommate asked him.

"Well, Tom has a drag with the dean, and I know he could get me reinstated just by asking."

Gibler accepted the Hindu proverb that if you have a friend on the police force, respect for the law is not essential. He believed thoroughly in making friends with the sons of Belial.

It is a curious and rather general point of view that if we know some one of importance or even if we know somebody who knows somebody in a position of influence that fact entitles us to special consideration, special privilege, the right to ignore regulations and to violate the law.

A boy came to me not long ago to enlist my help in getting a job.

"My father is very well acquainted with Senator Blank," he said, "and he knows....." And then he named a long list of more or less prominent citizens and officers of the state.

"How would that fact help you to do a job well?" I inquired.

"Well, I suppose it wouldn't," he was forced to reply.

"And what about the boy who wants a job and whose father is so unfortunate as not to know anyone of importance?"

"He'd just be out of luck."

"We never hold it against a boy who wants work that his father knows a lot of prominent people. He has just as good a chance as anyone else."

He looked at me curiously; but I don't think he understood. It was unintelligible to him that anyone who knew a congressman or a policeman didn't have a better chance to get something he wanted than another not so fortunately situated.

It is interesting to see how often a man, when he wants something that he has no legal right to have, shows me a badge or a button or a membership card in some organization to which I myself belong, or brings me a letter from an acquaintance of prominence, saying:

"Mr. Brown is a man of influence in our community and an intimate friend of mine. If you can see your way clear to set aside the regulations in his case I shall appreciate the courtesy."

And such a man expects that it will be done. It isn't justice he is after; it is special consideration. Knowing a man on the police force, he felt quite sure that he could get by.

It's a poor theory.

Feel Stiff and Achy?

To Be Well the Kidneys Must Thoroughly Eliminate Waste Poisons from the Blood.

DOES every day find you lame, stiff and achy? Do you feel tired and drowsy—suffer nagging backache, headache and dizzy spells? Are the kidney secretions scanty and burning in passage?

Sluggish kidneys allow poisons to remain in the blood and upset the whole system.

Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, increase the secretion of the kidneys and thus aid in the elimination of waste impurities. Doan's have established a nation-wide reputation. Ask your neighbor!

MENLO PARK

Council Meeting

The town council met in regular session Tuesday, all members being present in response to the Mayor Blake's request for reports of committees. Brown, chairman of the license committee, reported that owing to the holidays the committee did not do much work but had looked over the Redwood City schedule of rates and had agreed to recommend it with a few changes. The committee was given further time to make a complete report. Harcom, chairman of the building ordinance committee was given further time to report. The secretary reported that the sum of $1018.19 was in the treasury and deposited in the American Trust Company bank. City Attorney Whitworth reported a discrepancy in the dates of the certificate of incorporation in the date and the seal were differently dated. He was authorized to make the correction. The attorney also read section three of the ordinance relating to the conduct of meetings, compelling the attendance of the members and placing a penalty on them for not doing so. The ordinance as a whole was adopted as read on motion of Harcom, seconded by Ellis. Mayor Blake then announced the names of the various commissioners as follows:

Streets, Sidewalks and Parks, Harcom; Health and Safety, Heltzel; Light and Water, Ellis; Fire and Police, Brown; Finance, Blake.

A communication from the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. asking for extensions and changes in its system in Menlo Park was referred to Harcom of the Streets, Sidewalks and Park commission. Harcom, temporary inspector, reported that he had received a communication from the state fire marshal in which he stated that a permit was given to a certain contractor to erect a building for the Menlo Park Cleaning and Dyeing Works on Doyle street. In looking into the matter Harcom discovered that the permit called for a structure to be erected on a large lot in Valparaiso Park instead of the lot on Doyle street, which was not large enough to conform to the rules of the fire marshal. Harcom declared it was a serious breach and the offense should be severely dealt with. Mayor Blake called upon Captain Whittaker, deputy state fire marshal, to give his views on the subject. The captain confirmed all that Harcom had said. The new building that was started for the dyeing works on Doyle street was halted and may never be completed on its present location.

E. E. Quayle was given permission to address the board. He delivered a lengthy address in which he state that the board should take cognizance of the fact that a junior college could be secured for Menlo Park through the co-operation of the board and the citizens. He showed how a movement was foot to form a district including Mountain View, Palo Alto and the Sequoia Union High School District, and to erect a building on a parcel of land owned by Stanford University near town at a cost of $500,000. He also pointed out the big benefit to be gained by the large experimental gardens to be established by Stanford University and other simialr institutions, extending from the San Francisquito Creek to the Searsville Lake. Hundreds of men would be employed there. Quayle urged that the locating of the junior college would perhaps dispense with a portion of the sum needed for the proposed addition to the high school at Redwood City. Quayle asked that a committee be appointed by the mayor to look into these matters, whereupon the mayor appointed, E. E. Quayle, Mrs. Emma Stribbling, J. W. Pembroke, Frank Cain and C. A. Metcalf.

No further business appearing, the board adjourned until Tuesday evening, January 10.

Pope Well Informed

Advices rom Rome tell of the Pope receiving in audience Father McGarr and Father Sheedy, former graduates of St. Patrick's Seminary in Menlo Park. The pontiff showed much interest in the work pursued at the seminary. His Holiness appeared to be well informed as to the work done at the institution and of the many able priests ordained there.

Blair Property Sold

Mr. Blair has sold his property on Doyle street to the Menlo Park Cleaning and Dyeing Works which is erecting a building on it to be used by that concern as an office and work shop.

Death of Lucy M. McPherson

Lucy M. McPherson, widow of Doctor George E. McPherson, pioneer physician of San Francisco, passed away at Mary's Help Hospital in San Francisco on Tuesday at the ripe old age of 86 years. Her remains will be interred in the officer't plot alongside the remains of her husband in the national cemetery at the Presidio on Saturday. Her husband was an officer in the civil war. The deceased was the mother of Charles E. McPherson, the widely known resident of Atherton. She often visited her son there. She is survived by another son, Robert R. McPherson. Mrs. McPherson was beloved and liked by all who knew her for her benevolence and kindness.

Library Moved

The public library has been moved from the old Menlo Hotel property to the city hall in the bank building and will be in charge of Mrs. Abbel.

St. Joseph's Alumni to Meet

The fifth annual meeting of St. Joseph's Alumni will be held at the auditorium of the school on Sunday afternoon. It is to be the largest gathering of the former pupils in the history of the organization. Preceding the routine business an entertainment is to be given by the pupils of the school. The officers of the year are to be chosen at this meeting and much rivalry is manifested for the various positions. At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments will be served to the gathering by the kind sisters of the school.
